1. DAIRY PRODUCTS

Hellim (Halloumi) is a traditional Cypriot cheese that is identified by its semi-hard and rubbery texture. It is a popular choice for many different dishes as an alternative to traditional cheese due to its high melting point. It is very popular worldwide due to its distinguished quality and unique taste. Hellim/ Halloumi can be made from different types of ways such as either from cow's milk or sheep's milk or a mixture of both. It is white with a distinctive layered texture and slightly has a salty avor. Hellim/Halloumi is not very high in fat and it is an excellent source of protein.

The avor of 'Hellim/Halloumi' is very appealing, unlike any other cheese; it is so versatile that it can be consumed fresh or used in cooking; can be fried until brown without melting due to its higher than normal melting point; making it a good cheese for frying or grilling. It can be grated on top of pasta and other dishes or used as a stuffing for ravioli and pastries, fried in cubes and served in soup. Also tastes delicious when used as an ingredient in salads, served with vegetables and as a sandwich ingredient.

Other than Halloumi (Hellim) cheese types in North Cyprus are Fresh Kasar, Processed Cheese, Fresh White Cheese, Mature Cheese and Mozzarella. Fresh Kasar Cheeses which are mostly produced from cow's milk are vacuum-packed. Eaten in breakfasts and used in toasted sandwiches or on baked foods in the same way as mozzarella cheese. Fresh White Cheese is salty and made from unpasteurized sheep milk. Fresh White Cheese (Beyaz peynir),

Kashkaval and Mozzarella are produced in a variety of styles, ranging from non-matured cheese curds to a quite strong mature version. It is eaten plain, for example as part of the traditional Turkish breakfast, used in salads, and incorporated into cooked foods such as pita and börek.

North Cyprus Milk Products Producers use the latest technology equipment in the production of milk, Halloumi, butter, cheeses, and dozens of ice-cream varieties, which are manufactured in accordance with HACCP and ISO22000 standards.

Honey is a naturally sweet substance made by bees from plant nectar, plant secretions, plant living parts, or plant sap-sucking insects. Bees collect these materials and transform them by mixing them with specific compounds within their bodies to create honey. The extra water is then drained out as it is deposited in the honeycombs of the hives to mature. Simply put, bees use nectar, which they collect from blooms, as the primary raw material to make honey. They may also use the natural juices that some plants release, the fluids that other insects emit, or a combination of these sources. The most demanded honey types in Northern Cyprus are mountain and thyme honey which is mainly produced in the Karpaz region and citrus honey in the Guzelyurt region.

Macun is a type of Jam that is a fruit confectionery unique to Turkish Cypriot cuisine. The jam-like paste is made with fruit, sugar and water. Many different types of fruits are used in the making of Macun such as, bergamot, citrus, zucchini, fresh walnut, the bark of the watermelon, and wild fruits such as hawthorn. Macun is dessert that is usually consumed with water, Turkish coffee or fresh lemonade.

8. TRADITIONAL MEALS

TARHANA

Tarhana is the name of a dried food based on a fermented mixture of grain and yoghurt or fermented milk, usually made into a thick soup with water, stock, or milk. It is a popular food option in Cyprus and it is common to add cubes of Halloumi cheese towards the end of cooking.

MOLOKHIA

The Molokhia is indigenous to Cyprus and was originally found growing on the banks of the River Nile in Egypt. It is a leafy vegetable that most Cypriots pick and dry during hot months. Chopped molokhia branches over the sheets and are put out in the sun or spare room to dry, ready to be cooked all year round. There is also a meal by the same name that many locals enjoy quite frequently at home and at select restaurants.

9. ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES & SOFT DRINKS

Turkish Raki is one of the most popular spirits in Turkey, Bulgaria, Greece, Middle- East, Albania, Bosnia, and other Balkan countries. There are many similar drinks just like Raki named ; Pastis, Ouzo, Sambuca, Arak and Aguardiente. The main ingredient used to make this spirit is aniseed and grape pomace. This spirit is mainly served next to grilled barbeque, seafood and meze. Raki is traditionally produced by twice distilling grape pomace in traditional copper alembics and avoring it with aniseed.

Ice Cubes: Cool bottles, chill drinks with ice cubes made with pure water that is be altered to ensure its purity
The Mediterranean climate is also very suitable for growing grape vines giving them a different taste when compared to other wines in the surrounding regions. Quality wine production has increased with more investments in this sector. Most of the vineries are boutique and products are high quality.

Currently exporting to: Western Europe

CITRUS PRODUCTS

The Orange has a major role in the history, tradition, and culture of North Cyprus and its people. Oranges are grown for many purposes; eating, processing, oils and mainly for orange juice production. Cyprus had a wide number varieties of oranges and earned a reputation for its high quality. Valencia, Jaffa, Mandora are the most famous ones. Valencia Oranges are mainly exported to the Middle East, Asia and Europe. (Season: February–May) Jaffa Oranges have tough skin and are easily exported around the world. (Season: December–January) The Mandora synthesizes Mandarin and Orange. High demand from Turkey and Europe has allowed this variety to increase its levels in export. (Season: January–March). The Clementine has no seeds and is very juicy which increases in sales because it is easily edible mainly for children as well as adults. (Season: October–December)

North Cyprus enjoys international recognition for the quality of its lemons. North Cyprus lemons have thin skin and incredible juiciness. The smell and the juice quality of North Cyprus Lemons are one of the best in the world. (Season: October–February)

North Cyprus has an ideal climate for grapefruits. They are tender and juicy with a sweet-tart, mildly acidic flavor. Main Varieties are White Marsh Seedless, Rio Red. The season for this citrus fruit is between October – December The citrus essence oils are used for medical and psychological treatment purposes and is essential for treatment of anger management, reducing anxiety, condense, memory and concentration.

Currently exporting to: Eastern Europe, Western Europe, Middle East, Central Asia and Northern Africa.

POTATOES & KOLOKAS & ARTICHOKES

North Cyprus Potatoes are grown in the unique environment that is a perfect blend of the red soil which has a higher mineral content, and the sunny mild-Mediterranean climate. Cyprus Potatoes are harvested twice a year: autumn and spring harvest. Spring potatoes are harvested for sale earlier than most other European and Middle Eastern countries. Favourable climate conditions in North Cyprus lead to early harvesting where the spring crop is harvested from April to June and the fall crop is harvested from November to December. North Cyprus also offers GLOBALGAP certified potatoes to the leading markets.

Season: Spring and Autumn

The variety of artichokes grown in North Cyprus is called the Green Globe. These types of artichokes contain magnesium, dietary ber and chromium which involve Vitamin C and Vitamin A. Modern facilities are available for the production of heart Artichokes which are supplied as; fresh, frozen and concentrated. These products can be provided throughout the year. Y Season: January–May.

Kolokas is a type of vegetable grown mainly in Cyprus for its edible roots named Taro and Eddie. This plant has been in Cyprus since the time of the Roman Empire which has early cultivation and can be harvested easily. The increasing demand for exportation has boosted the amounts produced and mainly 90 % of the exports are made to the United Kingdom.

Currently exporting to: Western Asia, Middle East and Europe.

POMEGRANATES

North Cyprus has suitable climate conditions for pomegranate growing. The production of pomegranate fruits has increased significantly due to new cultivation areas and investors in the last decade. The modest production over the last years was replaced with a professional and rational investment program in pomegranate production which has already led to higher demand for North Cyprus in the crops. Season: September – December

CAROB

As the carob tree is one of the traditional trees in North Cyprus, it is a well-known country for providing organic carobs to worldwide markets. Almost half of the production of carobs, including the carob seed and grounded carob, is exported each year. The valuable seed of carob can be used for a variety of production like paint, ink, textiles, paper, insecticides and shoe polish. Carob is considered as the 'black gold' of North Cyprus and seeds are used to make locust bean gum – sometimes known as Ceratonia or carob bean gum which is a high-value export commodity.
